Summary of CV and Professional Experience

James Tompkins, a Professor of Finance at Kennesaw State University, is also a founding member of their Corporate Governance Group where he served as Director of Board Advisory Services from 1999 and became its Director in 2016. He is also an advisor in Corporate Governance for the Cox Family Enterprise Center, and serves on the Board of Metalforming Inc., as the lead independent director.

James has been working with Boards and Senior Management in a variety of in-depth corporate governance consulting assignments since 1999. He has provided Corporate Governance expert witness/litigation support in several high-profile cases including among others Enron, J.P. Morgan (London Whale), Diebold (accounting restatements), Sprint (Sprint-Nextel merger), Colonial BancGroup (FDIC quote: “the most expensive Bank failure in U.S. History”), and Poe Insurance (Department of Financial Services quote: “the largest insurance insolvency in Florida’s history”). Other cases have also included restaurant franchise, healthcare, energy, technology, and other industries. NACD’s Directorship listed James as one of 34 “People to Watch” in corporate governance. In the article, the NACD recognized “a short list of movers and shakers who merit serious attention as potential boardroom influentials”. His experience with Boards and top Management includes facilitating and developing optimal governance policies and practices, designing and teaching corporate governance education seminars, designing the processes and conducting Board and Committee evaluations, and advising on other corporate governance issues unique to the client. James has governance-consulting experience with both public and private firms, nonprofit companies, and family businesses. His board experience with non-profit companies includes Chairing both Compensation and Finance Committees as well as serving on Executive and Governance Committees. James has published in the area of corporate governance in both journals and practitioner outlets such as NACD’s Directorship, Directors and Boards, and Family Business Magazine. He is an active academic researcher in corporate governance and corporate finance and has authored both research papers and cases in these areas.

Complementing his interest in Corporate Governance, James has enjoyed success with his academic career. He was the Michael J. Coles College of Business recipient of the “Distinguished Graduate Teaching” award for 2018, “Publication Prize” award for 2017, “Career Achievement” award in 2016, “Research Collaboration” award for 2014, “Distinguished Teaching” award for 2013, “Distinguished Professor” award for 2012, “Outstanding Service” award for 2001, and the “Outstanding Scholar” award for 2000. He was also the winner of Kennesaw State University’s “Distinguished Graduate Teaching” award for 2005. In 2007, he received a Senior Specialist Fulbright Scholarship in Greece where he conducted research and lectured on Corporate Governance. He is also the creator of the You Tube Channel “Understanding Finance” with over 5000 subscribers.

James received his Bachelor of Science with honors from the United States Merchant Marine Academy. Upon graduation in 1979 he worked his way up to Chief Officer on unlimited tonnage ocean-going vessels. In 1986 he earned his M.B.A. from the Wharton School of Business with a major in Finance. In 1987 he began working for FMC, a multinational conglomerate, and advised the Board of Directors and Management on major capital budgeting decisions. In 1989 he began his Ph.D. in Finance and graduated from the Ohio State University in 1994 when he joined Kennesaw State University. James is married to his wife Angela and resides in the Atlanta area.

The Corporate Governance Group, founded in 1995, is the oldest Governance Center in the United States. It is nationally recognized as a leading provider of corporate governance research and insight to directors, corporate executives, researchers, policymakers, media, and other interested parties. Composed of more than 20 professors from several universities, the Corporate Governance Group is international in scope and interdisciplinary in its approach. Our faculty have experience with all aspects of corporate governance including director education, governance research, expert witness / litigation support, and more.
