Dear Colleagues,

I am pleased to bring your attention to a Special Issue of the Journal of Risk and Financial Management that focuses broadly on the areas of Behavioral and Experimental Finance. Behavioral Finance, in particular, is a relatively new field that uses insights from economics, psychology, sociology, and neuroscience to understand individual and corporate decision-making, as well as market outcomes.

Empirical contributions that provide insight into behavioral issues using archival or experimental methods are welcome, as are experimental examinations of more traditional finance questions such as asset pricing, risk management, and corporate governance.

Please see the information below on manuscript submission through the JRFM page on the MDPI website.
